Mr. Beck supported the house provision of the bill calling for the redemption of the trade dollar, but strongly opposed the suspension of the coinage of be standard collar. The proposition to suspend silver coinage had no becessary or proper a meeting with the trade dollar bill which the house had sent over. He believed that the trade dollars had now passed from the hands of the prople who were compelled to par with them at discount and were now in the hands of count and were now in the hands of bankers and brokers. There was no accident or inadvertence about it Mr. Beck said. They were made coins of the United States just as gold was so coined. The provisions probliding counterfeiting applied as equally to the trade dollars as to the gold eagle.

The debate was continued to considerable length, when Morgan presented the credentials of re-election of Senator Pugh.
